PLOWS FOUR FURROWS GASOLINE HIS POWER

C. Y. Wagner Installs Modern Machine on Farm Near Bellefonte.

TURNS 8 ACRES A DAY

Capacity Four to One as Compared With Single Plow and Two-Horse Team—First Machine of Kind Tried Out on a Centre County Farm.

Plowing, four furrows at a time, and with power furnished by a gasoline engine instead of horses is now a reality in Centre County. C. Y. Wagner is the owner of the modern gasoline engine plow which follows the pattern of the gigantic machines now in use in the great grain States in the West. His machine, is not only the first to be tried out in Centre County but is, we understand the first to be put to practical use on any farm in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Wagner purchased his gasoline engine plow through L. H. Musser, at a cost, complete, we are informed, of upward of $2000. It was received in Bellefonte last week, another plow of the same type arriving at the same time. It is stated that several prospective purchasers of the second plow deferred closing the deal for it until after a thorough test might be made of that secured by Mr. Wagner.

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Wagner put his machine together, made the necessary adjustments and engaged in an actual test in a field of his 250-acre farm, known as the Seibert farm, three miles beyond Roopsburg. No attempt to make speed was undertaken at that time, attention being devoted chiefly to mastering details, such as adjusting the plow-shears to meet the requirements of the soil.

The gasoline engine plow, especially for larger farms, has revoluntionized plowing. A four-furrow plow, such as that purchased by Mr. Wagner, has a demonstrated capacity of four to one as compared with the single-furrow plow drawn by a two-horse team. The capacity of the latter is about eight acres per day. With his four-furrow plow Mr. Wagner will be able to turn up an average of eight acres per day. The ratio is just about four to one.

Mr. Wagner purchased his modern plow for use on his farm and not for renting out, as some persons have surmised. A brief description of the plow will be interesting to the public in general, and especially to farmers. The gasoline engine is no different from the regular type. Two persons are necessary in plowing a field, one to run the engine and the other to operate the plow. The engine is a separate machine and travels ahead of the plow. A platform covers the plow, the operator guiding and handling the plow-shears by means of levers. The four-furrow plow cuts a uniform width of fifty-six inches, or fourteen inches to each furrow. Furrows may be cut to any depth ranging from six to ten or twelve inches, depending on the power of the engine and the condition of the soil. In the tests made with Mr. Wagner's plow the furrows averaged about seven inches.

The modern plow is intended for level or principally level ground. Mr. Wagner informs us that it may easily be operated on slight inclines, but that it is not intended for plowing steep hills. Care must be exercised in operating the plow in fields where deeply imbedded rocks abound.

While the first cost of the modern plow makes it almost prohibitive to owners of small farms its use may become quite general among owners of large tracts.

Mr. Wright A Candidate.

State Treasurer Charles Wright has made formal announcement of his intention to go before the Republican state convention as a candidate for the nomination for the full elective term as state treasurer, which office he now occupies by appointment of Governor Stuart. Mr. Wright made his announcement in the form of a letter copies which were sent to a large number of the delegates.

FALLS INTO HOT WATER CHILD DIES IN AGONY

Daughter of Edgar Vallamont Scalded to Death at Moshannon.

MOTHER NEAR AT HAND

Stepped Out of Kitchen to Get a Broom and Fatal Accident Happened in Her Absence—Child Lingered Until Noon of Following Day.

Georgia, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Valamont, of Moshannon, toppled backward into a bucket of water in the kitchen of her home last Saturday and was so badly scalded that she died at noon on Sunday. The accident which so suddenly snuffed out the life of the child caused widespread sorrow in that community.

Mrs. Valamont had heated some water with which to scrub the kitchen floor. After placing the scalding water in a bucket she stepped out of the kitchen to get a broom. She was gone but a few seconds, but during that brief period occurred the accident which plunged the home into the keenest grief.

Unconscious of any danger, the little girl, while walking backward, fell into the bucket. Her screams brought the terror stricken mother into the kitchen as rapidly as she could run, but even so it was too late to save the child. The little girl suffered intense agony until noon the following day, when she passed away.

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Mrs. Nancy O'Bryan Passed Away Suddenly at Her Home Here Friday Night.

Retiring on Friday night, last, in apparently good health, Mrs. Nancy O'Bryan several hours later passed away suddenly and was found dead in bed at her late home on East Logan Street. It is supposed that her death was due to heart failure. About two years ago she had a hard fall at her home, and since that time had been in gradual decline in health. However, there was nothing noticeable about her condition to indicate that the end was so near at hand and she was in the best of spirits when she retired on Friday night. The discovery of her death was made by a daughter, Mrs. Harry Smith.

Mrs. O'Bryan was aged 68 years and resided in Bellefonte during the greater part of her life. She was a woman endowed with many noble qualities and by a large circle of friends she was loved and greatly admired. During her entire life time she was an active member and worker in the Lutheran church. She was the widow of the late James O'Bryan and is survived by these children: Mrs. E. B. Greene, of Altoona; Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Thomas Hazel and Mrs. James Stickler, of Bellefonte. Surviving also are these brothers and sisters: John Markle, of Baltimore; Samuel Markle, of near Harrisburg; Joseph Markle, of Detroit; Mrs. Caroline Manck, of Roth, and Mrs. Lea Osman, of Lemont. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon, interment being made in the Union cemetery.

Baseball Fans Getting Awake.

The prospects for a winning baseball club for Bellefonte seem very promising.

Register J. Frank Smith, well versed in baseball, has been working hard for the last two weeks selecting a combination from the local talent, numbering about 20 candidates. Local base ball fans will readily see that funds will be necessary in order to maintain and defray expenses. Although previous teams representing Bellefonte required much money in order to keep in perfect running order, the team this year will require no money at all relative to salaries until it can be put on a paying basis.

Up until this writing, Mr. Smith has selected 11 men who cannot be excelled by any other amateurs from a town this size in the state. This was proven last Thursday afternoon on Hughes Athletic field when the Bellefonte team played the strong Academy nine to a 0-0 score.

Mr. Smith desires all persons interested to meet at his office at the Court House this (Thursday) evening, at 8 o'clock.

May we hope to see all our business men present as well as all ardent fans who wish to have Bellefonte represented on the baseball map.

Struck by Lightning.

Lightning on Monday of last week struck the cupola of the Mifflin county courthouse at Lewistown, causing about $100 damage.

To the Republicans of Centre County:

This is a frank, friendly talk with the Republicans of Centre County. We have one or two suggestions to offer. Our one and only object in view is harmony in the Republican party and success at the polls. We hold to the belief that with complete party harmony Republican success in Centre County can and will be achieved not only now and then but at each succeeding election.

In offering our suggestions we ask only that they be carefully and unselfishly considered by each and every Republican in this county. We do not say that which we propose is the best or only plan which might be advanced. If an honest, free, sincere exchange of opinions among Republicans will develop some better plan we will be all the more pleased, for what we wish to see not only made possible but made a reality is results.

So that no one may have any right or reason to believe or even suspect this article to have been inspired to help or injure any one Republican or number of Republicans we desire to say that the suggestions we will present have not come from any outside source. We are presenting this article unknown to and without any consultation with either of the recent contestants for the Republican County Chairmanship. The primaries are over and no contests being under way, we deem the present the best time for all Republicans to plan for the future.

In 1906 our uniform primary election law was passed by the Legislature. It revolutionized the method of nominating candidates in Pennsylvania. More recent Legislatures have adopted amendments to the primary law. Changes in the State Constitution have radically revised our whole election system. Whether the changed conditions are for the best we do not undertake to say. However, the changes have been made, new conditions are here and will probably continue in force for some years to come. The only course left open to us as Republicans is to adjust ourselves to the conditions as we find them.

First and foremost we would suggest that the Republican party rules in Centre County be revised to conform to the general requirements of the uniform primary law. If we are correctly informed neither the Republican nor the Democratic party rules in the county have been revised to conform to and harmonize with the uniform primary law. The significance of this, aside from the importance of establishing an orderly method of procedure, is that neither the Republican nor the Democratic party in this county would have any legal standing in case of a contest in the courts. Our present Republican rules in this county were adopted when the old county convention system for nominating candidates, etc., was in force. All that is now changed, but our rules remain as they were. They met old conditions but they do not meet the present order of things.

To revise the Republican rules it will be necessary for the chairman to issue a call for the Republican County Committee to assemble at a given time and place as a "Rules Revision Convention." Once assembled for this purpose the committee will be free to adopt such party rules as may be deemed best. Under our present rules, the chairman of the Republican County Committee is elected for a stated period. The chairman so elected in turn appoints a local chairman in each borough or ward or township. These local chairmen constitute what is popularly known as the Republican County Committee. Just by way of illustration in showing the necessity of bringing our party rules up-to-date, we might point out that whereas our rules provide for the election of a County Chairman by a county convention and to serve one year, or until his successor shall qualify, we are now electing a County Chairman by direct vote at the primaries and under the amended primaries law party officers (including County Chairman) may be elected every two years, only.

From the foregoing we feel quite sure every Republican will at once grasp the situation and appreciate the impo[illegible] Rules Revision Convention could very co[illegible] committee is assembled sometime in the next few months to prepare for the November campaign.

Now for another suggestion. Instead of there being a knife or a hatchet concealed anywhere within its folds, it is a suggestion which embodies the extending of the olive branch by all Republicans to all Republicans. We believe that a closer cooperation between the several local chairmen and the County Chairman will be had during campaigns and proportionately better results secured at the polls if a new plan for electing both is adopted. We would suggest that our party rules be so revised that ward, borough and township chairmen shall be elected at the primaries and that the local chairmen so elected shall constitute the County Committee and shall in turn and by a majority vote elect the chairman of the County Committee. The County Chairman may or may not be selected from among the several local chairmen.

This plan, like any other, has its advantages and disadvantages. It has been adopted by and is today in operation in a number of counties. We think it has more good points than bad points. In our judgment it is a better plan than that now in force in this county. To begin with a County Chairman elected by a County Committee will be accountable to not only the party but to that committee. If he doesn't attend to business there will be a way open for securing somebody who will. In the second place it will be strictly up to the County Committee to attend to business by cooperation to the fullest measure with the one selected by them as their Chairman. It is undeniably true that at best the task of a County Chairman is a thankless one. He gets no praise when a ticket is successful, for the victorious candidates usually regard the victory as having been won by their individual efforts. In the event of defeat the burden of the blame is placed squarely upon him, whether justly or unjustly, and the unsuccessful candidates honestly, even though mistakenly, believe that another result could and would have been secured had there been another Chairman at the helm.

As it is there is little or no inducement to strong, capable men to assume the duties and burdens of the Chairmanship, and one can only be a successful Chairman at a tremendous sacrifice of his own time and business interests. To be a successful Chairman any man must lock the door of his place of business and give his undivided time to politics during each campaign. If there is one thing above all others that will prompt a strong, capable man to make this sacrifice for the sake of his party it will be a call to duty extended him by a vigorous, healthy, active County Committee. And the chief inspiration to prompt him to accept will be the knowledge that he will have about him and working with him a body of Republicans striving to win and by winning thereby proving that they were worthy of the trust placed in them by the people in their respective home communities.

The way it is done nowadays the County Chairman appoints the local chairmen. It often happens that a local chairman, if he is not reappointed, becomes a sorehead and starts out to "get even" with the County Chairman. He may succeed but his revenge is a costly one to the party and to every candidate on the ticket. It sometimes happens that a local chairman accepts an appointment with no intention whatever of giving the office the time and attention necessary to secure results. Here again the party suffers. Now and then a local chairman is appointed who has the misfortune to be involved in all the feuds and quarrels going in his particular section. The result is that his enemies go after his hide, not to hurt the party but to humiliate him. The party, however, suffers. Occasionally a local chairman is appointed who, although eminently qualified in many other respects, lacks the qualifications for making a good local chairman. He may do the best he possibly can, but this may not be very much and here again the party suffers. In each instance the responsibility finds its way back to the County Chairman. No one man can be expected to be familiar with all the peculiar conditions prevailing in each of the sixty-one election districts in Centre County. To be so gifted would embrace the wisdom of a Solomon and the patience of a Job, and unfortunately there is no such composite creature within calling distance just now. Even if there were we doubt that he would care for the position.

But place upon the Republicans of each district the responsibility of selecting and electing their local chairman. Having had a voice and active hand in his selection they will be more likely to help him in the campaigns and at the polls. Knowing that he is directly responsible to his home people he will naturally exert himself to "make good." If he won't do this his home people will very quickly find somebody who will. The plan proposed will retain at their post all local chairmen who belong there. Any who may be retired will have their home people to be sore at and not the County Chairman.

In brief, the plan places the entire management of the party directly in the hands of the people, and in our judgment that is where it belongs. Chairman Quigley announced before the primaries that he expects to retire January 1, 1913. Between now and that date all Republicans will have ample time to consider whether they want to continue the present antequated system or endeavor to adopt some plan which will have as its keynote, "thorough cooperation and party harmony."

STATE COLLEGE KILLS $30,000 SCHOOL LOAN

Measure Defeated at Special Election Held on Saturday.

124 FOR; 154 AGAINST

Proposed Increase in Debt Was to Build and Equip New High School Building—Project Warmly Debated by Friends and Opponents.

At the special election on a proposed $30,000 school loan held at State College last Saturday the project was voted down, 154 to 124.

The proposed loan was to provide sufficient money with which to build and equip a new High School building. The merits of the project were freely debated in advance of the election. The friends of the loan were confident that it would muster sufficient strength to carry, but when the vote was counted it was found that the opponents were in the majority, leading by 30.

The fight on the proposed increase in the borough indebtedness was one of the most keenly contested over witnessed at State College.

WRITES LETTER HOME FROM FAR OFF CHEFOO

Rev. Samuel McClure Tells of Custom and Experience in China.

SPREADING THE GOSPEL

Bellefonte Boy Engaged in Missionary Work in Heathen Lands Sends Interesting Narrative to His Parents, Mr. and Mrs. James I. McClure.

Rev. Samuel McClure, who is engaged in missionary work in China, recently wrote the following interesting letter to his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. James I. McClure. The letter was written from Chefoo, and was mailed on March 20th. Several weeks were required to carry it to Bellefonte, six different postmarks being stamped on the envelope in the course of transfer and delivery. The letter, in part, follows:

My dear Mother and all:—

At home we speak of rainy weather being good duck weather. I suppose we would speak about the windy days of Chefoo as being good kite weather.

Wind storms are very common here and very often do much damage. The windows here are hung on hinges and one is obliged to keep them fastened continually as the storms often come suddenly and would work havoc if the windows were not fastened.

It is very interesting to watch the small boats going out to meet the steamers during a storm. The boats rise with the waves and of course go down with them. One often wonders if they will ever come up again.

Some of us were going out to the "Buffalo," an American gun boat last Sunday to have a meeting with the men, but it was too rough for the launch to come in for us. The "Buffalo" and "Saratoga" are here now. I can see them from my window. There are also five other gun boats in the wharf.

In Chefoo there are now about twelve thousand [illegible] suppose they believe with some others that the best way to preserve peace is to prepare for war.

Yesterday I stopped in at the Presbyterian museum. It is located back of the preaching hall. The people must first listen to the gospel being preached in the chapel, then they are allowed to go into the museum. There had been about three hundred gone through when I arrived. Hunter Corbett was there preaching to the people. He is from Princeton. I heard him speak there several years ago. He is now rather old, but very much interested in the work. In the museum there are mostly stuffed, or rather mounted, animals, birds, snakes and butterflies. They also have a force of evangelists to preach and show the people around.

Tomorrow I am going out to a walled town, ten English miles from here. The population is about thirty thousand. There are also as many living in that district in the surrounding villages. I will tell you about my trip when I come back. Dr. Corbett is sending a man with me. In order to start early I will take breakfast with Dr. Corbett. I expect to walk unless I find a horse today.

Jesse T. Leathers Married.

The home of Mrs. Jennie Ruch, on Third Street, Northumberland, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday evening of last week, the contracting parties being her daughter, Miss Almeda May Ruch, and Jesse Thomas Leathers, of Howard. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Michael, pastor of the St. John's Lutheran church. The beautiful ring ceremony was used. The interior of the Ruch home was tastefully decorated with roses, smilax, palms and carnations. The bride was attended by Miss Helen VanAllen, of Northumberland, while the groom's best man was his brother, Fred Leathers, also of Howard. The guests were the immediate families and a few intimate friends of the happy young couple. Following the wedding a delicious supper was served and then Mr. and Mrs. Leathers departed on a honeymoon tour to southern cities. While at Harrisburg on Thursday they were entertained by a number of Dickinson Law School students, former classmates of Mr. Leathers. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Leathers will reside at Howard. Mr. Leathers is the junior member of the well known real estate firm of Leathers Brothers, which for some time past has had a branch office at Northumberland. His bride is an accomplished and very popular young lady and is amply qualified to lend grace and dignity to her new home. She is a graduate of the Northumberland High School, later studying music in New York.

Titanic's Dead 1442; But 705 Saved.

The ghastly record of the sinking of the Titanic is 1442 persons lost and but 705 saved. All hope that the list of those saved might be larger was dissipated with the arrival on last Wednesday night of the Carpathia. This liner had on board all who were rescued. Since that time despatches from different boats have announced the finding of upward of 200 bodies, many of them without any signs or marks of identification. The revision of the list of those saved confirmed the earlier despatches telling of the drowning of Colonel John Jacob Astor, the New York multi-millionaire; J. B. Thayer, a Pennsylvania Railroad official; Isadore Straus, the noted philanthropist; George D. Widener, the Philadelphia traction magnate, and numerous others prominent in business and professional circles.

The United States Senate committee investigation, instituted on the day of the arrival of the Carpathia, has resulted in the pointing of the finger of scorn at J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star Line, who was one of the very few men to leave the Titanic and escape in rescue boats. Ismay, in his own defense, denied that he had left with any women or children remaining on board the Titanic. The investigation is still under way at Washington.

A fund for the relief of the Titanic survivors has been liberally subscribed to in all parts of the world. A smaller fund is being raised to build a monument in Washington to the memory of Major Archie Butt, who was personal aide to President Taft, and who was among those to go down on the Titanic. Tales told by survivors let it be known that Major Butt gallantly refused to leave the Titanic, remaining behind to do all in his power to enable women and children to escape.

A remarkably clear and concise statement of what transpired on the Titanic from the time of the collision with the iceberg to the actual sinking is that given by J. B. Thayer, Jr., the seventeen-years-old son of Mrs. J. B. Thayer, of Philadelphia. The young man's father, who was the second vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was among those drowned. Young Thayer on Sunday gave out the following:

"Father was in bed, and mother and myself were about to get into bed. There was no great shock. I was on my feet at the time, and I do not think it was enough to throw anyone down. I put on an overcoat and rushed up on A' deck on the port side. I saw nothing, there. I then went forward to the bow to see if I could see any signs of ice. I saw only ices [illegible] deck. I could not see very far ahead, having just come out of a brightly lighted room. I then went down to our room and my father and mother came on deck with me, to the starboard side of 'A' deck. We could not see anything there. Father thought he saw small pieces of ice floating around, but I could not see any myself. There was no big berg. We walked around to the port side and the ship had then a fair list to port. We stayed there looking over the side for about five minutes. The list seemed very slowly to be increasing. We then went down to our rooms on 'C' deck. All of us dressed quickly, putting on all our clothes. We all put on life preservers, including the maid, and over these we put our overcoats. Then we hurried up on deck and walked around, looking out at different places until the women were all ordered to collect on the Port side. Father and I said good-bye to mother at the top of the stairs on 'A' deck. She and the maid went right out on 'A' deck on the port side and went to the starboard side. As at this time we had no idea the boat would sink, we walked around 'A' deck and then went to 'B' deck. Then we thought we would go back to see if mother had gotten off safely, and went to the port side of 'A' deck. We met the chief steward of the main dining saloon and he told us that mother had not yet taken a boat, and he took us to her. Father and mother went ahead and I followed. They went down to 'B' deck, and a crowd got in front of me and I was not able to catch them, and lost sight of them. As soon as I could get through the crowd I tried to find them on 'B' deck, but without success. That is the last time I saw my father. This was about one-half an hour before she sank. I then went to the starboard side, thinking that father and mother must have gotten off in a boat. All of this time I was with a fellow named Milton C. Long of New York, whom I had just met that evening.

"On the starboard side the boats were getting away quickly. Some boats were already off in a distance. We thought of getting into one of the boats, the last boat to go on the forward part of the starboard side, but three seemed to be such a crowd around I thought it unwise to make any attempt to get into it. He and I stood by the davits of one of the boats that had left. I did not notice anybody that I knew, except Mr Lindley, whom I had also just met that evening. I lost sight of him in a few minutes. Long and I then stood by the rail just a little aft of the Captain's bridge.

"The list to the port had been growing greater all the time. About this time the people began jumping from the stern. I thought of jumping myself, but was afraid of being stunned on hitting the water. Three times I made up my mind to jump out and slide down the davit ropes and try to make the boats that were lying off from the ship, but each time Long got hold of me and told me to wait awhile. He then sat down and I stood up waiting to see what would happen. Even then we thought she might possibly stay afloat.

"I got a sight on a rope between the davits and a star and noticed that she was gradually sinking. About this time she straightened up on an even keel and started to go down fairly fast at an angle of about thirty degrees. As she started to sink we left the davits and went back and stood by the rail about even with the second funnel. Long and myself said good-bye to each other and jumped up on the rail. He put his legs over and held on a minute and asked me if I was coming. I told him I would be with him in a minute. He did not jump clear, but slid down the side of the ship. I never saw him again. About five seconds after he jumped I jumped out, feet first. I was clear of the ship, went down, and as I came up I was pushed away from the ship by some force. I came up facing the ship and one of the funnels seemed to be lifted off and fell towards me about fifteen yards away with a mass of sparks and steam coming out of it. I saw the ship in a sort of a red glare, and it seemed to me that she broke in two two just in front of the third funnel. At this time I was sucked down, and as I came up I was pushed out again and twisted around by a large wave, coming up in the midst of a great deal of small wreckage. As I pushed it from around my head my hand touched the cork fender of an overturned life boat. I looked up and saw some men on the top and asked them to give me a hand. One of them, who was a stoker, helped me up. In a short time the bottom was covered with about 25 to 30 men. When I got on this I was facing the ship. The stern then seemed to rise in the air and stopped at about an angle of 60 degrees. It seemed to hold there for a short time and then with a hissing sound it shot right down out of sight with people jumping fr[illegible] stern either capsized a[illegible] our boat, or were sucked toward it, and as we only had one oar we could not keep away. There did not seem to be very much suction and most of us managed to stay on the bottom of our boat.

"We were then right in the midst of fairly large wreckage, with people swimming all around us. The sea was very calm and we kept the boat pretty steady, but every now and then a wave would wash over it.

"The assistant wireless operator was right next to me, holding on to me and kneeling in the water. We all sang a hymn and said the Lord's prayer, and then waited for dawn to come. As often as we saw the other boats in the distance we would yell "Ship Ahoy!" but they could not distinguish our cries from any of the others so we all gave it up thinking it useless. It was very cold and none of us were able to move around to keep warm, the water washing over her almost all the time.

"Towards dawn the wind sprang up, roughening up the water and making it difficult to keep the boat balanced. The wireless man raised our hopes a great deal by telling us that the Carpathia would be up in about three hours. About three-thirty or four o'clock some men on our boat on the bow sighted her mast lights. I could not see them as I was sitting down with a man kneeling on my leg. He finally got up and I stood up.

"We had the second officer, Mr. Lightholder on board. He had an officer's whistle and whistled for the boats in the distance to come up and take us off. It took about an hour and a half for the boats to draw near. Two boats came up. The first took half and the other took the balance including myself. We had great difficulty about this time in balancing the boat as the men would lean too far, but we were all taken aboard the already crowded boats and in about half or three quarters of an hour later we were picked up by the Carpathia.

"I have noticed second officer Lightholder's statement that J. B. Thayer was on our overturned boat, which would give the impression that it was father, when he really meant it was I, as he only learned my name in a subsequent conversation on the Carpathia and did not know I was 'Junior'."

High School Students Make Hit in "She Stoops to Conquer."

"She Stoops to Conquer," as presented in Petriken Hall last Friday night by Bellefonte High School students was undoubtedly one of the best and most pleasing home talent entertainments witnessed by a local audience in many years. As a flattering tribute to the students for their faithful preparation and rehearsals, the house was crowded and the audience was generally enthusiastic.

To attempt to enumerate those who did well would be but to call the roll on the entire personnel of players. As a whole, it was a well drilled, capable group and while the big audience was visibly delighted the most satisfied ones were the players themselves, for in the knowledge of success lay their reward.

"She Stoops to Conquer" was given in five acts, the first and last acts representing two scenes, and the second, third and fourth, one each. The realistic fire place in scene one was made possible by the kindness and courtesy of Morris Baum. The cast of characters was as follows:

Charles Marlow (son of Sir Charles) .....Basil Mott
George Hastings (his friend) ..... Edward Garbrick
Tony Lumpkins, (son of Mrs. Hardcastle).....John Woods.
Mr. Hardcastle.....Lewis Swartz
Sir Charles Marlow.... Paul Rumberger

The next interesting event in High School circles will be the junior declamatory contest, which will be held in the auditorium of the new High School building on Monday, May 27.

Examine Your Seed Corn.

Prolonged rains in August and September followed by a severe early freeze damaged much seed corn in Pennsylvania. All seed corn should be given a germination test as promptly as possible. Seed that does not give a satisfactory germination should not be used. To use the average seed corn of the state without rejection [illegible] result in a loss of [illegible] to Pennsylvania farmers.

The Pennsylvania State College Experiment Station has just concluded a test of 102 samples.

The results represent a test of 6 kernels from each of 2560 cars or a total of 15,360 kernels. Of the samples testing 95 to 100 per cent. there are 24 or less than one-fourth of the corn tested. This is good seed, and shows 963 good ears out of 1000. The 37 poor ears of which 30 give a germination of 4 out of 6 kernels, would not seriously affect the seed.

The 86 to 94 per cent. class in which there are 29 samples, gives only 849 good ears in 1000. In such corn the poor ears should be rejected by actual germination test. This is still more importation for the third group in which there are 291 poor ears in 1000. The last group of 27 samples is very poor, showing only 42.5 per cent. of the ears to be suitable for seed.

An average of all tests shows 80.6 per cent. of the kernals germinated. By rejecting 263 bad ears from every 1000 the remaining ears give an average germination of 96.5 per cent. This is satisfactory and can be secured by making a germination test of each ear. For method of testing seed corn see circular number 30 of The Department of Agricultural Extension.

Miners Agree on Scale.

The joint scale committee of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, after two weeks of deliberation reached an agreement at DuBois at midnight Saturday night.

The scale is somewhat lower than the miners demanded, particularly in regard to dead work. The scale is signed for two years and is as follows:

Pick mining per gross ton, 72 cents; pick mining per net ton, 64.29 machine loading per gross ton, 42 cents; machine loading per net ton, 37.23.

The following classes of work shall be advanced above the wages paid for that class of work during the scale year ending March 31, 1912:

Cutting and scraping, either by the ton task, 4.17 per cent.

Dead work and yardage, 4.44 per cent All inside day labor, excepting cutting and scraping, by day, 4.44 per cent. All outside day labor, 5 per cent. Trappers and patchers, 5 per cent.

For Clothes Moths.

A valued correspondent writes to Prof. H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, Pa., asking how to get rid of clothes moths which are destroying a couch cover. The reply gives information that may be useful to others troubled with this destructive pest. It is as follows:

"You can destroy the clothes moths by saturating with benzine or gasolene the fabric which they infest. If you will dissolve a very slight proportion of corrosive sublimate in alcohol, using not more than one part by weight to one hundred parts of water, and pour or sprinkle this over a cloth it will poison it and render it immune to them.

"Where clothes moths infest articles that can be spread and shaken, it is a good plan to take them in the sunshine in an open yard, and whip them thoroughly with strong whips and air them well. If one can place small articles in an oven and watch the temperature that it does not get higher than something like one hundred and fifty to one hundred and sixty degrees, he can kill this pest by heat. Where the articles are small enough to put them into a closed vessel a very excellent method is to put them into something that can be closed tightly and pour over them or set upon them a shallow pan containing the liquid known as carbon bisulfide and let it stand and fumigate three or four hours or more. At least one pound of this should be used for each one hundred cubic feet of space, and more will do no harm. Keep fire away from it, as it is explosive, the same as the fumes of benzine or gasoline.

"A barrel will do very well for this purpose, fastening over the top of it two or more sheets of oil cloth, holding it in place by a hoop placed outside. As a last resort for household pests, we can fall back upon fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, which is certain to be effective if properly done, but which is both expensive and somewhat dangerous by careless persons. Follow directions for this method of fumigation which are sent free from the office of the Economic Zoologist, at Harrisburg, when requested."

Oil Refinery Fire.

At 2 o'clock Monday morning the Pump House of the Waverly Oil Works at Pittsburgh took fire from some unknown cause, and immediately communicated with the Agitators, all of which were destroyed.

Four firemen were injured by an explosion of vapor arising from an illumination oil tank which became overheated on account of its proximity to the burning agitators.

The burned portion was in the very center of the plant, and the insurance authorities consider it remarkable that the fire was confined to this small area, surrounded as it was by tanks containing petroleum products of every description. The flames were not extinguished until 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

A rather remarkable incident was the saving of a tank containing almost 500 barrels of 76 deg. Gasoline, which was within less than fifty feet of the burning agitators, and directly in the line of the flames.

The Waverly Oil Works Co. announces, however, that their business will not be interrupted in any way, and that they can fill all of their orders with their usual promptness.

Pocketless Baseball Shirts.

In the May American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton writes an article full of interesting stories of freak plays that have won great baseball games. Following is one of the most remarkable stories:

"Among the abnormal incidents that figured in the earlier history of the national game, perhaps none is as well known to old-timers as the one which happened to Cliff Carroll, on the St. Louis grounds, when he was a member of the famous 'Browns.' Perhaps you have wondered why baseball players have plain shirt fronts, and why so few players have breast pockets. Cliff Carrol is the reason. He was running forward to take a base hit on the first bound. The ball bounced crooked and hit him on the chest. He grabbed at the ball hastily and, as he clutched it, he shoved it down into the handkerchief pocket on his shirt front. The runner saw Carroll tugging and straining to tear the ball out of the pocket and instead of [illegible] sprinted onto second while Carroll, [illegible] the ball, ran to second. The batter passed the fielder and turned for third with Carroll in pursuit. At third Carroll stopped and tried in vain to release the ball, and the runner kept on across the plate and scored the winning run. Chris Von der Ahe, who at that time was at the head of the euphonic trio, Von der Ahe, Muckenfuss and Diddlebock, which operated the club, was furious and ordered all pockets removed from baseball shirts. Other teams followed and the pockets never have been restored, except by a few players who are willing to risk the repetition of the accident."

Pin Money Growing Lettuce.

In the collection of short contributions to the May Woman's Home Companion, in which various writers gives suggestions about home gardening, appears the following from a woman who lives in Wisconsin:

"My success in home gardening came about by glancing over the market reports of a daily newspaper. I noticed that head-lettuce was quoted at fifty cents per dozen. Then I decided to grow and ship lettuce. Labor being cheap, I hired a boy to do the heavy work, such as fertilizing and preparing the ground. Early in the fall I had it plowed again, and made into narrow but rather high beds. In these beds I planted my seeds, using the Big Boston variety. I planted every third row, and when the plants had three or four leaves I transplanted them in the beds I had left vacant. As soon as the weather began to get cool, the plants grew very fast. Lettuce requires a cool, moist atmosphere and light, rich soil. I had these conditions, and my lettuce grew rapidly.

"As soon as the heads began forming, I looked around for the best market. After hearing from several commission houses, I was offered $5.60 per sugar-barrel of fourteen dozen heads. I packed and iced each barrel, carefully picking off all decayed leaves, and shipped to Milwaukee and Chicago houses.

"My first shipments netted me $4.20 commission; express, ice, and barrels being about $1.40, seed and labor $3. Hoeing and transplanting I did myself. When all of my lettuce was sold, I had $83 to my credit."

Married While You Wait.

Paris matrimonial agencies are peculiar if we can believe the story of a young man who was shaved, dressed, presented married, banqueted and supplied with a requisite number of uncles and aunts in the space of three weeks says the New York Sun. He was fresh from the provinces. "We can certainly get you married in two weeks," said the matrimonial agent; "what kind of a bride would you like?"

"Oh, so and so."

"Very well. We have one who may please. What kind would you like the mother-in-law to be?"

"Oh, so and so."

"Well, this one is just the thing."

The mother-in-law was fond of feasts and banquets, and the bridegroom flattered her taste in that way. The wedding was at once prepared.

"Where are your papers?"

"Oh, I do not know."

"Well, we know of an agency that gets all the necessary papers.

The young man consented.

"I suppose you've got [illegible]"

"I have not a soul in Paris."

"We will supply you with one. What kind of a wedding feast? How many carriages?"

"I have no idea."

"Then we shall refer you to another agency which attends to all the ceremonials. They will see to sending out letters of invitation, have a sufficient number of guests, landaus, motor cars, flowers, etc. Now as to the bride's trousseau. We can recommend an agency that supplies the orange blossoms. What about relatives?"

"Must there be some relatives at the wedding?"

"Certainly."

"But I have none in Paris."

"Then we can supply you with them. A father costs 20 francs, a mother 20 francs, and uncles, aunts, brothers and sisters somewhat less."

"Very well, let me have as many as I need."

The young man, when it was over, had an enormous bill to pay, but he declared that really his wedding was one of the most stirring in Paris, and they were driven to the most fashionable church. In conclusion, he was given the address of another agency, which undertakes to settle all conjugal differences.

WILSON GETS STATE

New Jersey Governor Captures Majority of Pennsylvania Delegation.

Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, won a majority of the Pennsylvania delegates to the Baltimore national convention at Saturday's primaries. Champ Clark captured a few delegates, as did also Governor Harmon, of Ohio, but the great majority of the delegation goes to Baltimore pledged to Wilson.

In many congressional districts where factional fights prevailed both sets of candidates for national delegates were pledged to Wilson, the fights being mainly for local control. The Clark and Harmon managers did not exert themselves especially in Pennsylvania. Many of the delegates who pledged themselves to Wilson did so when the Wilson boom was at flood tide. In the last few weeks the Wilson movement has been on the wane, so a good many Democrats believe, and because of this it would not be surprising if efforts were put forth by the Clark and Harmon managers to win over some of the Pennsylvania delegates between now and the time for holding the Baltimore convention.

There are some Democrats who have studied the situation in their party and who say that it would be by no means surprising should William Jennings Bryan precipitate a movement at Baltimore to stampede the convention to just such another spectacular nomination as that which he captured by his "Crown of thorns and cross of gold" speech. It is an interesting situation with the possibility of Bryan again leading the Democratic ticket. It is regarded as rather significant that Bryan has studiously avoided any test of strength in a single election district where primaries have been held. Several attempts have been made by his friends to put him forward to match his strength against that of Wilson, Clark or Harmon, but each time Bryan has personally directed that his name be withdrawn. This, in the judgment of some, has been done by him to not only hold himself aloof from all entanglements but also that he may appear in the Baltimore convention as a factor of unknown strength and for this reason ready to jump into the breach as a compromise candidate should there be a deadlock between the publicly avowed leading aspirants.

Decides Against Mine Foremen.

A decision of considerable importance to Snow Shoe, Clarence and other soft coal fields has been given by the Attorney General's Department to James E. Rodee rick, state chief of mines, and may affect miners' examining boards. Mr. Roderick asked whether an acting mine foreman, instead of a miner in actual practice could receive an appointment as a member of a board to examine applicants for certificates of qualification to act as mine foreman assistant mine foreman and fire bosses. Such boards are to be named by the Courts of Common Pleas under the soft coal code of 1911, each board to consist of an inspector, a miner of 10 year's experience and an operator or superintendent.

It is held that there is "a definite legislative intent expressed in the act to distinguish between the duties of operators, superintendents, mine foremen, fire bosses and miners." A miner and mine foreman are held to belong to different classes and a mine foreman is declared to be ineligible for appointment to such a board.

Important to Young Mothers.

In an article on "The Healthy Baby" in the May Woman's Home Companion, the author, Dr. Roger H. Dennett, a well-known New York specialist on children's diseases, says in part:

"The mother's milk is the only food that was ever meant for a baby during his first year, and any other food is at best a poor substitute This being so, the young mother should first of all guard her own good health for the sake of the baby, if not for herself. She should keep good hours and get plenty of sleep. A certain amount of exercise helps the milk in quantity and quality, though fatigue should be avoided; so if the mother has not been accustomed to exercise before the baby was born, attention should be given to it afterward. Gradually increase the amount of exercise, perhaps by walking a little farther each day, always being careful to stop just short of the point where one gets tired."

Plant 72,000 Pine Trees.

Plans are being perfected for the planting by the State of 72,000 young white pine trees on state lands in the Big Run region tributary to the Beech creek. The trees will be from eight to ten inches in height and are being shipped from nurseries in Connecticut. Forest Rangers John Liggett and Alexander L. Shoemaker will have charge of the work of planting the trees.

Just this side is Palm City Farms, the most fertile soil in Florida, consisting of a rich dark loamy soil, underlaid with marl and clay, and in the Banner County, in producing a larger yield, per acre, by 30%, than any other County in the State, and gives larger returns, per acre than the States o. Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Ohio combined. The yield is $600 per acre, in three months after planting eggplants, tomatoes or peppers, and $200 per acre from potatoes in 100 days following the above mentioned crops, on same ground. Table Napery Fashions.

Although the days have passed away when the housewife was also the spinner and the whole of the household linen was spun and woven at home, the possession and the care of fine drapery still continue to be regarded as the outward and visible sign of a good wife and housekeeper. In the matter of table linen especially taste seems to be growing ever more extravagant, for not only must it be of the finest quality, but it must be also lavishly embroidered and inset with lace.

The large damask tablecloth has given way to the vogue for sets of linen mats, including large oval ones to be placed beneath the dishes, small circular ones for the meat plates and still smaller for use with cheese or salad plates. The change in fashion is all on the side of the decorative, for not only are the mats extremely beautiful in themselves, but they afford an opportunity likewise for the display of a fine dining table, the darkness of the wood showing up to advantage the silver and cut glass arranged upon it. The mats themselves are usually placed upon others of thin wicker or of closely twisted string, in order to obviate the possibility of harm to the table through the best of the dishes.

Some especially choice sets of these dinner mats are of hand-made linen richly embroidered in an openwork pattern of leaves and flowers executed after the manner of the "broderie anglaise." Into the worked design is introduced a number of Italian filet lace squares, also hand worked, and displaying in their design all manner of quaint beasts and birds copied from antique models. The edges of the mats are finished with a narrow border of thread lace, and although the effect is elaborate in the extreme the materials employed are sufficiently substantial to withstand a very fair amount of wear and tear.

Mrs. Charles Kline, 42 No. 8th St., Easton, Pa., desires others to realize the value of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for coughs and colds. She says, "Several members of my family have been cured of bad coughs and colds by Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It soothes and relieves the irritation in the throat and loosens up the cold in the lungs. I have always found it a reliable cough cure, and always recommend it highly." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Gave Her $7 in Fifteen Years.

Judge Trexler at Allentown granted an absolute divorce to Ursula Banner Stettler from Rev. Eugene S. Stettler. He is a Lutheran clergyman, coming originally from Mahonoy City and is a graduate of Muhlenburg college. They were married in 1897. The wife testified that all he gave her in the fifteen years of their married life to support herself and two children was seven dollars. The court ridiculed his defense that whenever his wife asked for support his reply invariably was: "The Lord will provide."

"Jake" Hahn Dead.

Jacob B. Hahn, the well known tobacco salesman of Philadelphia, died in that city last week. He was well up in the seventies. "Jake" Hahn was one of the first traveling men to visit this neighborhood. He began back in the late sixties and had been a regular visitor ever since.

"I was Crippled could hardly wal and had to Craw down stairs at times on my hand and knees. My doctor told me I had an acute attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I was in the hospital for weeks, but was scarcely able to walk when I left it. I read about bought a bottle and began to get better from the start, and for the past six months I have had scarcely any pain and am able to walk as well as ever." J.H. SANDERS, P. O. box 5, Rockaway, N. J.

Few medicines are of any benefit for rheumatism, but Mr. Sanders tells plainly what Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine did for it. One ounce of salicylate of soda added to one bottle of Nervine makes an excellent remedy for rheumatism, which is now known to be a nervous disease and therefore subject to the influence of a medicine that acts through the nerves, as does

Sufferers from rheumatism seldom fail to find relief in the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine, with salicylate of soda.

HEROES AND TWO OTHERS.

A crisis brings out the good or bad that is in a man. The field of battle develops the true soldier and it also brings to the surface the coward. The burning building tests the mettle of the fireman. It is the crisis, the happening of the extraordinarily unusual, that separates the real man from the sham and the make-believe.

Standing out conspicuously in the story of the wrecking and sinking of the liner Titanic is the signal bravery of many men and, sad to relate, the disgraceful cowardice of two others. Colonel John Jacob Astor, possessor of many millions of dollars, had the opportunity to leave the sinking ship, but he chose to remain behind that women and helpless children might be saved. John B. Thayer, second vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and a man of wealth, selected to remain and meet his doom that his wife and other women might live. George D. Widener, millionaire and traction magnate, kissed his wife goodbye, handed her into a lifeboat and turned aside that some other man's wife or mother or sister also might be saved. Major Butt, gallant soldier, could have saved himself, but he saved others and sacrificed himself. These were but a few of the men on the Titanic who were heroes. In more humble stations, perhaps, but none the less heroes, were the little group of musicians who remained on deck and as the proud liner went down with its 1400 or more helpless passengers ushered their souls into eternity to the comforting strains of that beautiful hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

And then there were two who chose to live rather than to go down to a hero's grave. One was a high official of the company that owned the Titanic. He stepped into a lifeboat, because it was his company's property, and saved himself and thereby robbed some woman or child of the one remaining chance to live. It wasn't an equal chance. As a part owner of the ship it was his duty to help save as many as possible among those who had entrusted their lives into his company's care. Had he saved as many as he could he would not have saved himself. He saved himself and he lives, but with him there will go through life a conscience that will mock by day and haunt by night. The name of this person is already known and sneered at the world over. The second person who also boarded the ship as a man and left it as a coward has not as yet been identified. To gain an unequal chance over others he hastily donned a woman's skirt, a woman's coat and a woman's veil, and thus disguised he cravenly escaped by taking a place in the lifeboat with women and children. He was saved, but he thereby denied to a woman or a child the chance to live. He lives, but to such a person life will mean nothing. He may continue to breathe until his features are effaced by time, but he will never be able to look men in the eye. Far, far better had both these persons remained behind and given up their souls to the Captain of All Ships as the drowning musicians played "Nearer My God to Thee" than to have seized the chance to live by paying a price that to their dying day means dishonor.

CHANGE THE PRIMARIES.

The recent primaries in Centre and other counties in the State made glaringly apparent a vital defect in the primary law. Probably no one realized it it when the Legislature fixed the Spring primary on the second Saturday in April in presidential years, but when placed in actual operation it was found that the new plan disfranchised several hundred voters in Centre County alone. It is a fair assumption that as many, if not more were deprived of their vote in every county in the State.

April 1st is the long established day for persons to change their residence. That is the big moving day of the year. Custom has resulted in the making of leases from April to April. A custom so thoroughly established is not likely to undergo a change at this late day. For farmers and others it is a fixed institution made so by reason of the fact that it is about the most convenient time in the year for them to move. The custom is just as firmly established in the towns, boroughs and villages.

To be eligible to vote at the primaries one must have resided in his respective election district at least sixty days. This is made mandatory. There is no automatic adjustment to make the law conform to individual cases. It is the law and it applies to all. The spirit of the primary law is not to discourage but to encourage voting. At the same time one cannot vote unless he is properly qualified. Scores upon scores of voters of all parties made their usual plans this year for changing their residence on April 1st. They did not allow the fact that they would lose their vote at the primaries to interfere with these plans. They therefore were disfranchised by a mere lapse of thirteen days. That is, had they been able to remain in their former districts just thirteen days longer they would have been eligible to vote. They had but one alternative. It was remain at home and save their votes, or move and lose their votes. As between the two they naturally chose to move.

It is of course recognized that the Spring primary in presidential years must be held unusually early in order that delegates may be elected to the national conventions, which are held in June or July. At the same time, it does not necessarily follow that the primaries must be held in April. By holding the primaries during the last week in March no one would be disfranchised and all would still be able to carry out plans for moving on April 1st. The matter is one which should be corrected by the next Legislature.

Her death is deeply mourned by all who knew her.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitution disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing the work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Marion Township.

Mrs. John Yearick is not improving very rapidly, we regret to note.

Mrs. Tillie Peck was visiting among friends here during the past week.

Mrs. Henry Antes is not improving as rapidly as her many friends would wish.

Albert Womelsdorf is still suffering somewhat from his attack of grip and lumbago.

Our flittings are all over and every Dutchman has both feet on the ground by this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Yearick are elated over the arrival of somebody to help about the house.

Mrs. Ruth Moore, nee Holmes, last week moved to her nicely furnished home at Mackeyville

Alden Garrett is doing fine with his new chopper. If you haven't been to see him as yet, just fill up your bags now and call upon him.

Mrs. Ed. Smith and daughter, of Beech Creek, were among our Sunday visitors, spending the day with the former's father, Samuel Aley.

E. L. McClintock, our brand new huckster, is making the other fellows sit up and take notice. Boost her up, Ed. We like to see 20c eggs this season of the year.

Melvin Long, who was away for three years, gladdened the hearts of his grandfather and grandmother last week by turning his face homeward. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. David Long.

Jacob Thiel, who last summer bought the Joseph Hoy farm, occupied it this spring and is circulating around like a genuine farmer. We are always curious about good, new men who come into our section. Consequently the following was asked of David Long: "David, what is Jake's religion?" David replied: "I don't know what his politics is; now that's right."

The many friends of John Shafer are unanimous in the wish and hope that he will in the near future again take his place among the "brawn and sinew" of our community. Mr. Shafer has always been a most excellent citizen and is not in the class that is sick from choice. His industry is evidenced by what he has accomplished. We certainly hope that he will shortly be able to be about and overlook his farm as he used to do. John Rockey, who is Mr. Shafer's tenant, impresses his new acquaintances here as one of the men we are always looking for. Send for some of your neighbors if they are all as good as you are, Mr. Rockey.

Mrs. Thomas P. Beightol, whose illness has already been mentioned in these columns, was called from our midst on Thursday morning of last week. She had been ill about eight months. Mr. and Mrs. Beightol have always been regarded as among our best families, and the death of Mrs. Beightol is not only a severe blow to her good husband, but we feel it as a distinct loss to our community. Let us all join in comforting and speaking the good word to Mr. Beightol in the hour of his sad and deep affliction. He rendered such loyal, faithful service to his wife during her entire illness that he has the sweet and consoling thought that nothing was left undone to make her last months and days and hours as comfortable as possible. When the weather was favorable he took her out driving or out walking and during the long winter months he was always trying to relieve her of pain and discomfort. Surely God has taken Home a good woman from among our midst. He has left behind in her husband a most excellent friend and neighbor and our earnest and sincere hope is that he may be spared to us for many years to come.

Blanchard.

Miss Olive Clark is enjoying a visit with friends in Williamsport.

Mr. and Mrs. David J. Kelley, of Bellefonte, were Sunday visitors at the D. B. Kunes home.

George Winslow, of Bellewood, was a pleasant visitor on Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Levina Winslow.

It is expected that a large number of Odd Fellows from here will go to Renovo to attend the big celebration on Friday.

On Sunday morning, last, Rev. W. H. Patterson preached a splendid sermon in the Disciple church in commemoration of the seventieth anniversary of the I. O. O. F. The attendance was very large and included quite a big delegation of Blanchard Lodge, No. 427, I. O. O. F., and also of the lodge of the Rebekahs, which was organized here a short time ago. The service was greatly appreciated by all present.

All the friends of Scott Holter—and he has a host of them all through this section—were glad to see him about last Saturday. He was accompanied by one of his daughters. Scott is one of the efficient school teachers in Liberty township and is a citizen who stands high in the estimation of the people in this community. He had hard luck this winter, having one foot badly injured by a cider barrel rolling onto it. However, it will take more than a dozen cider barrels to put Scott down and out, and the warm days will give him back all the strength he lost by being housed up so long.

Chicken thieves are becoming quite numerous in this burg. Keep one eye open and your gun in readiness. These night crawlers are becoming entirely too bold.

William Alfred Alexander, after a lingering illness, passed peacefully away on Monday evening at 6 o'clock, at his late home, one-half mile east of this place. Mr. Alexander had been a patient sufferer for a number of years, and in his death our community loses a worthy citizen and an honest, kind and christian gentleman. Funeral services this (Thursday) morning at 10 o'clock, from the late home, conducted by Rev. Mr. Ash of Milesburg. Interment in the lower cemetery.

Mrs. Mary L. Walker suffered a stroke of paralysis on Sunday, about 10 o'clock and has since been very poorly. She is 76 years old, which fact is regarded as being greatly against her chances for recovery.

Miss Margaret McKinney has returned home after a brief visit at Renovo with her sister, Mrs. Young. While she was there a fine little daughter was born to Mrs. Young and which has been named Relda Katherine Young.

Some of our young ladies made a flying trip to Snow Shoe last Friday, the party including Misses Hazzard, Cartwright, Walker and Holt. On the same day some of our young men were also Snow Shoe visitors, the number including Messrs Culver, Wagner, and Roll and Ed. Fye.

Mrs. William Wise and son Ellwood Orndorf, and Mrs. Isaiah Boob and son, William, attended Mrs. Musser's funeral in Mifflinburg last Friday.

Messrs John Kepner and Arthur Herman, of Tamaqua, are staying at the Woodward House for a few days. While here they intend fishing for trout.

Shearing Sheep In Syria.

The manner of shearing sheep in Syria and all Asiatic Turkey does not differ materially from the ancient methods of the people as applied to practically every other vocation. While the sheep industry is one of the oldest in the country, having existed for centuries in the same pastures where the ancestors of the present herders also tended flocks, there does not appear to have been any improvement in the manner of shearing or breeding the sheep. Shearing is still accomplished in the crudest way, the workers always leaving a considerable amount of wool on the animal, while the fleece removed is cut most unevenly. The shearers frequently cut great holes in the skins of the sheep, which by the use of modern shearing machines could easily be avoided.

Writer's Cramp.

Those who have to do a great deal of writing are liable to get an attack of writer's cramp. The first indication of writer's cramp is a feeling of tiredness in the hand and arm. Then words are formed very slowly, and suddenly the pen will fly upward or outward. This is due to a sudden spasm of the muscles affected. Anybody who is attacked with writer's cramp should give writing up for a time, since paralysis of the muscles may follow. He should treat the limb with an electrical battery and generally lie up and keep quiet.—Pearson's Weekly.

Curious English Well.

In the grounds of Livesey Hall, near Blackburn, there is a spring called "Mother Livesey's well." The curious thing about this well is that the water only flows during nine months of the year and is quite dry during the other three months—June, July and August—however wet the weather may be. The water always commences to flow on the same date each year and never freezes even during the hardest frost.—Leeds (England) News.

Last Saturday noon the fire department was called out to a fire which had started at the home of Hayes Schenck at the corner of Church and Black streets. The fire started on the roof, presumably from a defective flue and was quickly put out by some of the neighbors who formed a bucket brigade, and thus reducing the loss by not using the larger hose. The loss was very slight as only part of the roof was burned off.

Harold Mayes, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Will Mayes, was severely hurt on Monday evening about half past five when he was returning from their farm north of Howard to their home in town, driving a cow before him. He had a short rope attached to a halter on the cow and, not thinking, tied the other end about his waist. When in town, the cow wanted to go one way and he wanted to go another, consequently he tripped and fell, causing the cow to run and dragging him after her. The rope being short, he fell under the cows legs and she thus trampled him and after dragging him several hundred feet through an alley, the cow turned and started to bump him. The fact that the cow had no horns probably saved his life. Persons soon came to his rescue and being right at the office of Dr. Kurtz, he was taken in there where his wounds were dressed. On a close examination it was found that he had no bones broken, but received a number of severe bruises. His face was bruised very bad and his one eye injured so that he could not see out of it for some time. He is improving better than was expected.

NEW LABOR BILL A TAFT POLICY

Liability and Compensation Measure Progressive.

JUSTICE IS ITS OBJECT.

President Approves Proposed Legislation Making Federal Labor Laws Fit Modern Conditions—Legal Machinery Simplified.

As the result of the personal interest of President Taft in all matters affecting the workingmen of the country, congress has before it today a comprehensive bill on employers' liability and workmen's compensation which is recognized as one of the most progressive of the many achievements of the Taft administration. The bill was reported by a commission appointed by President Taft pursuant to a joint resolution of congress passed on June 25, 1910, and it was recently sent to congress by the president, accompanied with a message recommending its passage. As drafted the measure provides an exclusive remedy and compensation for accidental injuries resulting in disabilities or death to employees of common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce or in the District of Columbia.

This comprehensive legislation is the direct outcome of the general unsatisfactoriness of labor legislation passed by congress in recent years and is illustrative of the Taft method of reaching an admitted evil by a painstaking investigation followed by carefully considered laws. As is well known, the first employers' liability law passed in the last administration was declared unconstitutional by the courts. A new law to take its place was passed under this administration, but it was generally understood at the time that the comprehensive measure now before congress was to follow, both as to liability and compensation, as soon as the necessary investigation into the subject could be made. The result is that the workingmen of the United States, so far as they can be reached by federal law, will soon be working under one of the most enlightened labor laws on record.

Provision is made in the bill, as drafted tentatively, that every common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce shall pay compensations in the amounts specified in the bill to any of its employees who sustains personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment and resulting in his disability or to his dependents in case of death.

It is provided in the bill that the injured employee shall have medical attendance and surgical aid when necessary, the last mentioned being limited to $200. The monthly wages of an employee are deemed to be twenty-six times the established day's pay, and $50 is the minimum monthly wage payment. It is also provided that all compensation shall be paid monthly unless computed to a lump sum.

Death benefits are provided for at a specific percentage of the man's wages to be paid to the widow with an increase in the amount when there are dependent children, and in case of no dependents the payment of the burial expenses is required. The matter of personal injury compensation is also covered in a fair and equitable provision.

Another feature of the proposed act is a clear definition of the term "dependent" as well as of what constitutes an "injury" and an "employee." Legal complications are provided for, reports of accidents, payments and operations under the law to the interstate commerce commission are required, and it is declared that the proposed act shall take effect on July 1, 1912, and cited as "the federal compensation act of 1912."

In its investigations of this subject the commission determined at the outset that in substance the doctrines of the common law originating under comparatively simple conditions were unjust as applied to the complex relations of master and servant. The use of complicated machinery, steam and electricity has had the effect of increasing the deplorable antagonism between employer and employee and often giving a few injured employees large and frequently extravagant damages, while the great majority have been left to bear the entire burden without any recompense whatever.

At the time of the adoption of the common law rules of liability industrial conditions were radically different from those of today. The number of employees was smaller because there were few big industrial plants. The business carried on was small in extent, the appliances used in the work consisted largely of hand tools, while the power was simple in character, with little danger to the employee. Under such conditions the rules of common law originated.

Today there is a vast difference President Taft, in the message which transmitted the report of the commission to congress, aptly says, in speaking of the proposed bill, "that it is one of the great steps of progress toward a satisfactory solution of an important phase of the controversies between employers and employees that have been proposed within the last two or three decades. The old rules of liability under the common law were adapted to a different age and condition and were evidently drawn by men imbued with the importance of preserving the employers from burdensome or unjust liabilities. It was treated as a personal matter of each employee, and the employees were put on a level of dealing which, however it may have been in the past, certainly creates injustice to the employee under the present conditions."

The attention of congress to the great injustice of the present system was called by President Taft. He mentioned the fact that often the recovery of large sums in damage verdicts did not result in actual benefit to the injured person on account of the heavy expenses in litigation. The president expressed the belief that these burdens would disappear with the enactment of the proposed law, since the counsel fees are limited to a reasonable amount.

As further stated by the president, "the great object of the proposed law is to secure justice to the weaker party under existing modern conditions." He also declared that he would use his influence to aid in the enactment of the proposed law before the adjournment of the present session of congress.

The Wandering Watch.

Have you ever heard the story of the woman who was so disorderly that she could never find anything she wanted? Her watch gave her the most trouble. She could never put her hand on it when she wanted it. It finally became such a source of annoyance to her that she determined she would know where that watch was, anyhow, whether she knew where anything else was or not. So when she took the watch off she didn't allow herself to lay it anywhere but in a particular spot in her dresser drawer.

It was very hard at first, but after a time she had no difficulty in remembering to put it there. She formed the habit of order in connection with the watch. From that she got to putting everything in her room in its place. And so this woman evoluted from the most disorderly housekeeper in her neighborhood. And it all began with the watch!

Don't undertake too many things at a time and get discouraged. Do one thing at a time well, and when you have done that you will find your thought prompting you to doing something else equally well or better, and so on until you will finally have your house in order—your mental mansion as well as your material house.

Stylish Coat Set.

The right coat set on the right suit looks well, especially in warm weather, when it gives a fresh touch to a dark linen, serge or pongee.

One that has the merit of being stylish and quickly worked is in black and white. The collar is shawl shaped, deep at back, and the cuffs are five inches wide.

The surface is closely covered with a scroll design worked with white cotton couched with black at short intervals. The entire skein is used for the underlay and a single thread for couching.

The edge is finished in a straight buttonholing, a quarter of an inch deep, with a fine chain stitch worked close to it in black, which also re-enforces the purl.

Present For the Bride.

Nobody can fail to make delicious mayonnaise dressing with this clever new mixer, which removes all the responsibility from the cook's shoulders. In the measuring device are cups of just the right size for the appropriate amount of salt, mustard, vinegar and powdered sugar. When these have been blended with the yolk of a raw egg the oil is poured into the funnel attached to the beater and is delivered drop by drop into the mayonnaise.

Of course every good housewife knows that vinegar should not be allowed to touch the mayonnaise dressing until the very last minute and then only a little should be added.

FISCAL REFORMS PRODUCE RESULTS

Treasury Department Example of Economical Administration.

EVEN DEMOCRATS APPROVE.

Under Taft Reorganization Accomplished, Frauds Stopped and Law Violators Punished—Divorced From Wall Street.

The treasury department has recently received the commendation of the Democratic appropriation committee of the house of representatives for the results achieved in bringing about economy and efficiency in that department. The general basis of this unusual praise is the fact that it is costing $2,500,000 a year less to run this big business machine of the government than it did three years ago when President Taft began his administration and initiated his campaign for governmental economy by placing an experienced business man, Secretary MacVeagh, at the head of the treasury department.

The Economy Effected.

The amount now saved each year is a 10 per cent reduction in the previous cost. It tells but half the story of the actual economy effected; for there has been a 10 per cent increase in the business of the department during this time, making a total gain in the interest of the taxpayer of 20 per cent.

The eagerness that now exists to make political capital out of criticism makes the fact eminently striking that through this period of investigation and inquiry the treasury department has been found a fruitless field of operation. It has not even been mentioned in connection with the alleged "money trust," for the reason that the treasury department is now for the first time wholly independent of the big bankers of the country in its operations. That the department should always be above the slightest ground for moral criticism is of course one of the fundamentals of its administration.

Frauds Are Punished.

The vigor with which the administration has gone after those who have attempted frauds on the customs revenue is illustrated by the fact that more than $5,000,000 has been collected in fines against dishonest importers and attempted smugglers. Jail sentences in numerous instances have been added to the fines. The result has been the creation of a wholesome respect for the law on the part of importers and Americans who travel in foreign lands. The entire machinery for the collection of customs has been overhauled—with the result that valuations are made more accurately, and many channels for frauds have been stopped. One of the special aids in this connection has been the special agents' service, which the secretary has taken personally in hand.

The other collection agency, the internal revenue service, has been brought to a high degree of efficiency. Its collections last year were the highest in its history—$322,000,000—which was collected at the expense of 1 68-100 cents for each dollar, a substantial decrease in cost. Internal revenue collectors are now giving the major portion of their time to their official duties, an innovation brought about for the first time through the insistence of the president that efficiency of administration was more to be desired than the developing of political machines.

Where Savings Resulted.

Savings in the method of printing the paper money of the country have been made to the extent of $600,000 annually, while similar work in the mints has resulted in cutting down the expenses annually to the extent of $483,000. By using the mails instead of the express a saving of $60,000 a year is effected in sending wornout notes to the treasury for redemption. Nearly $50,000 a year is being saved through improved methods in handling the paper on which money and postage and internal revenue stamps is printed. A similar amount is being saved through closer scrutiny and economy in printing the stationery for the department. The revenue cutter service adds to the list a saving of $100,000 a year with increased activities, so also does the public health service. There are many more details of savings, all telling the same story.

Genuine Reforms Made.

And this story is the strongest kind of a denial of the charge that President Taft has used the government employee to further his own political advantage. There have been 1,801 unnecessary places abolished under the treasury department in the last three years. Five hundred and forty-two of these have been in the department service in Washington. None of those in Washington whose places were abolished have been separated from the service by that fact. Secretary MacVeagh has rigidly adhered to the policy of saving the vacancies which occurred in the department by resignation and death, and these places have been filled by those who would otherwise have been dropped.

The facts above set forth are convincing proof that under the administration of President Taft genuine reforms in administration have been accomplished in bringing the government business to the most practical and economical basis in the interest of the whole people.

Thought Concentration.

Professor Elmer Gates performs a very interesting experiment by immersing his hands and arms to the elbows in separate vessels filled with water just to the point of overflowing. By withdrawing his thought absolutely from one hand and concentrating it on the other he so expands the blood vessels in the latter by sending an extra supply of blood to it that the water in the vessel in which it is overflows quite perceptibly. To further prove this power of thought concentration he transfers the thought from one hand to the other without changing their positions until the other vessel overflows.

Professor Bell, inventor of the telephone, said that when driving in the provinces in extremely cold weather, when he was in great danger of having his feet frozen, he was able to send an extra supply of blood to them by concentrating his mind upon them and thus saved himself from a very painful experience.—Nautilus.

Jamaica's Booby Eggs.

Trade in booby eggs is one of the sights of Kingston, Jamaica. Long ago the British seamen gave the name "booby" to several of the species of gannets, because these fowls are regarded as stupid. The eggs are gathered in vast quantities on the islets at certain seasons of the year and taken to Port Antonio by the boatload. The arrival of a boat with booby eggs is the occasion of no little excitement among the negro women, who buy them by the box and then sell them by retail chiefly in Kingston, though they are also sold in other towns on the island. Though sold mostly by the dozen to housekeepers, booby eggs are also peddled, hard boiled, on the streets of Kingston, salt and pepper being provided that the purchasers may eat the eggs at once. These eggs are about two-thirds the size of an ordinary hen's egg and are quite palatable.

A Thoughtful Wife.

After weeks of waiting and longing for the sport, rods, reels, gaff, creel, everything was in readiness for a week's trout fishing. The young wife, smiling joyously, hurried into the room, extending toward her husband some sticky, speckled papers.

"For goodness sake," he exclaimed, "what on earth are you doing with those old fly papers?"

"I saved them for you from last summer," she answered. "You know you said you always had to buy flies when you went fishing!"

Woman, the Diplomat.

Herbert Spencer insinuates in one of his sociological works that the indirection, the coquetry, the finesse—nay, all the arts which we find so adorable in women—are modified forms of hypocrisy. Before the advent of civilization woman had in pure self defense to practice an elaborate deception. In order to please her brutal lord and secure predominance among dangerous rivals she had to disguise her natural sentiments and return caresses for blows and smiles for discourtesy. As she could not accomplish her purpose by force, she became an expert in domestic diplomacy. The craftier, the more guileful she was the better were her chances of survival. And thus it has come to pass that, though the necessity for intricate behavior is now much lessened, women practice today, in a more elusive and refined way, the arts which the instinct of self preservation imposed upon their barbarous ancestresses.—H. H. Boyesen in "Literary and Social Silhouettes."

No License Necessary.

If once a man keeps a dog and takes out a license the authorities appear to regard him as liable to pay the tax for the rest of his natural life. Consequently it is no unusual occurrence for a householder who, at some remote time, was the owner of a dog, to receive early in the year a somewhat curt note from the local excise officer reminding him that he has not renewed his permit.

A friend of the writer once received an official communication requesting his early attention to the fact that his dog license "had expired."

But the authorities were rather taken aback when the addressee simply wrote across the face of the communication, "So has the dog," and returned it.

Revelation of Talents.

"I understand he can ask more questions in a day than the whole family can answer in a week."

"Yes. He's going to make a fine hand on an investigating committee, one of these days."—Washington Star.

FIVE TROUT COST $50

Beech Creek Citizen Sorry He Exhibited Son's Catch to Stranger.

It is not wise to show others the trout you have caught, especially if there are any of the spreckled beauties in the bottom of your basket or pail under the legal size of six inches. This fact was impressed upon the mind of J. W. Waite, a Beech Creek merchant, whose young son caught a nice lot of trout on Wednesday of last week, says the Lock Haven Democrat. The father, in his pride over the son's good luck, took delight in exhibiting the trout to patrons and others who entered the store, evidently not being aware that there were undersized trout in the lot. In the group of callers at the store was a stranger who became interested and asked to see the trout, which were in a small earthen crock. The stranger took the liberty to remove all the trout and on measuring them found five to be under six inches in length. Introducing himself as J. E. Conklin, fish and game warden, he placed Mr. Waite under arrest for having trout in his possession under the size required by law. Mr. Waite accompanied the warden to this city and was given a hearing before Alderman James C. Smith. Mr. Waite acknowledged the charge, but desired a few days' time to consider whether or not he will appeal the case, and therefore gave bail until he makes up his mind what to do. If he does not appeal, he will be called on to pay a fine of $10 for each trout, or a total of $50, besides the costs.

Weather Favors Crops.

The weather bureau's crop bulletin, says:

The weather during April, to date, has been in marked contrast with the severe conditions that existed during much of the period since the beginning of the year, especially in the districts to the eastward of the Rocky mountains. In this territory the weather has been somewhat less favorable during April, but good rains have fallen lately in much of that region, and the soil is now generally well saturated with moisture.

In the winter wheat states west of the Mississippi the heavy snowfall of the last winter has left the soil well filled with moisture and the unusual snow covering doubtless proved highly beneficial to the wheat plant during the prevalence of the severe cold. In the winter wheat states east of the Mississippi the snow covering was generally lighter and afforded less protection during the severe cold. The soil is generally well saturated with moisture, and the favorable weather of the last week has forced vegetation rapidly in all portions of the belt.

In the spring wheat region the snowfall was less than usual generally; but good rains during the last week have put the soil in good condition, and the weather was favorable for outdoor work.

In the cotton region the season is backward everywhere, and in portions of the middle section the heavy rains of the last week have delayed still further the progress of the usual spring operations. In Texas and Oklahoma the soil appears to be in excellent condition as to moisture, and similar conditions prevail over the more eastern states of the belt. In portions of the lower Mississippi valley large areas is water from the severe floods, and much delay will occur in the usual spring work.

Bradstreet's Crop Report.

Advices as to the winter-wheat crop east of the Mississippi river do not improve, and there is said to be a prospect for a record abandonment owing to poor conditions in the states of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. The abandoned area is largely going into oats and corn, and the former grain's area will probably be greatly enlarged, thereby offsetting the decrease earlier expected. West of the river there is considerable damage reported in Missouri, but Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Nebraska reports are good. Spring-wheat seeding is progressing in the northwest.

Oats seeding is about one-half finished in the leading states.

Plowing for corn is delayed by wet soil, but this latter condition has made for improvement in grass lands.

Southern crop reports are depressing because of excessive rains in some sections, too cool weather, and lastly, because of the breaking of more levees in the lower Mississippi valley districts. Grain crop prospects are good in Texas. There has been little farm work done in Mississippi and Louisiana, but cotton can be planted as late as May 15. Large areas in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, comprising rich cotton lands, are under water. East of the river, in Alabama and thence eastward, there has been too much rain for farm work to be done. Frosts are feared as threatening the fruit crops in Tennessee.

Playing Safe.

"And about the campaign fund?"

"We won't permit ourselves to take any chances," replied Senator Sorghum. "The only fund we'll let them catch us with is a fund of valuable information."—Washington Star.

W. F. HARRITY DEAD

Was one Time Chairman of Democratic National Committee.

William F. Harrity, prominent lawyer, member of the board of education, former postmaster, national chairman of the Democratic party in 1897 and for years one of the potent figures in the Democratic party in the state and country, died at his home at Overbrook, Philadelphia, last Wednesday, in his sixty-second year. Death was due to congestion of the lungs.

In late years Mr. Harrity gave less attention to politics than formerly, devoting nearly all of his time to business affairs. He was one of the most successful corporation lawyers in the Philadelphia bar, and was a director in many corporations and financial institutions. He had a hand in the re-organization of several important corporations, and in 1902 took an active part in straightening out the tangled affairs of the Chicago Union Traction company.

His rise in politics was rapid. In 1889 he was postmaster of Philadelphia, and 1892 found him chairman of the Democratic national committee and director of Cleveland's successful fight against Harrison for the presidency.

In 1896 the Pennsylvania Democratic convention declared for Bryan, but refused to unseat Harrity on the national committee, although he was known to be opposed to the free silver plank in the Chicago platform. After that, however, Harrity never had his former influence in the councils of the Democracy.

Ask Change of Venue.

George C. Bayless and Fred N. Hamlin, the defendants in the manslaughter cases arising from the bursting of the Austin dam last September, have through their attorneys petitioned the supreme court of Pennsylvania, praying that the cases may be tried in a county other than Potter.

They allege that on account of the prejudice existing among the people of Potter county it would be impossible for them to get a fair and impartial trial.

A rule has been granted by the supreme court in answer to the prayer of the petitioners and Harry Nelson, of Coudersport, district attorney, has been cited to appear before that body and show cause why such prayer or petition should not be granted.

A change of venue would entail heavy expenses upon the county owing to the great number of witnesses who would have to be transported elsewhere for the trial. District Attorney Nelson will oppose the effort to change the place of the trial.

Neglige Notes.

Combination sets, night dresses and camisoles are made to match in hand embroidery and are very sweet and appealing. "One piece" garments continue to find approval in lingerie, and the princess petticoat is much preferred to a skirt and corset cover by women who wish to look slim and to wear their frocks unwrinkled by the clumsy folds of their lingerie. The waist line is high, and all these pretty undergarments, including nightgowns, are made with low cut necks and invite pneumonia, while of course, many of them are practically sleeveless.

Dusters.

For wiping oiled floors, prepare an oiled duster. Wring a sloth out of kerosene and hang it out of doors until perfectly dry. All odor of kerosene disappears and the cloth is not oily to the touch. This gathers the dust and holds it. It cleans as effectively as a damp cloth and without injury to the wood finish.

In order that every reader of the Republican who needs treatment may have an opportunity to test this celebrated medicine, the now famous Indiana scientist has come to the front with an offer to give absolutely free a large proof package to five hundred readers of this paper to prove the wonderful claims which have been made for it. In making this offer the scientist said: "I know that there are many people who have been suffering for years with some chronic disease and many of them have spent large sums of money seeking a cure. I know that these people hesitate about investing money in medicine because they have despaired of ever getting well. Thouands have told me that story and many thousands of the same people have told me afterwards that my treatment had cured them after doctors and everything else had failed. I want to show these despairing people that all the newspaper talk about my treatment is absolutely true. I want to prove to a limited number—no matter what the disease, no matter how long they may have suffered, no matter how blue and discouraged—that my treatment really and actually does accomplish the wonderful results that have been reported."

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Spangler are spending several days in Philadelphia.

Miss Laura Kephart, of Fillmore, was in Bellefonte yesterday doing her spring shopping.

Miss Hannah Newman, of Altoona, recently visited for several days at the Fauble home here.

These are the days when one enjoys a cooling, thirst-quenching drink. We have them, all flavors, at Green's.

J. Norman Sherer, now located with the Central Iron Company, at Harrisburg, made a business visit to Bellefonte on Saturday.

Misses Myrtle and Inez Sellers, of Waddle, spent several hours between trains in town yesterday, greeting friends and doing some shopping.

Ice Cream Cones that have the reputation of being pure and sweet can be bought at wholesale and retail from H. F. Alters, Bellefonte, Pa.

Fred Reese is home again after several weeks spent in Patton, where he was helping his brother, Will, who was ill but who has rounded to all right.

Miss Helen E. C. Overton and Mrs. John VanPelt were in Washington over Sunday in attendance upon the convention of the national chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The annual inspection of Company L, Twelfth Infantry, N. G. P., will be held in the Armory, Lamb and Spring Streets, tomorrow evening. The visiting inspector will be Major A. G. Rutherford, of Scranton.

Lorain Anderson, of Philipsburg, an ensign in the United States Navy, will be married on April 30th to Miss Cynthia Garst, of Annapolis, Md. The bride to be is a daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Perry Garst.

Manager Frank Kern, of the City Steam Laundry, has just installed a curtain frame of the latest and most improved type, which equips that well known institution to give complete satisfaction in laundering the very finest lace curtains.

James Uzzle, of Snow Shoe, returned yesterday from Baltimore, where his brother, George, is undergoing treatment in the Johns Hopkins hospital. It will be good news to George's many friends to learn that he is improving and that there is every reason to anticipate his recovery.

Application has been filed in the Centre County court for the transfer of the license of the Central hotel, in Philipsburg, from William H. Jones to W. H. Hindel, the latter of Gearhartville. Mr. Hindel recently purchased the hotel and will assume charge as soon as the license transfer is consummated.

Mary Florence Barlett, daughter of William Barlett, died on Tuesday, April 23rd, aged 9 years, 6 months and 12 days. She was an especially bright child and her death is deeply mourned. Funeral services will be held today, at 2 o'clock, from the late home of the deceased. Interment will be made in the Union cemetery.

Genial George Washington Rumberger, of Unionville, last Saturday celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary and an especially pleasant reminder of the day and also of the high esteem in which he is held by a host of friends was the receipt by him of 292 post cards. They came from all directions, from young and old, but all bore the fondly expressed hope that he might live to see and enjoy many more and equally happy celebrations.

George W. Zeigler, of the law firm of Zeigler & Fleming, of Philipsburg, was in Bellefonte on Monday, accompanied by Samuel H. Wigton and Albert Fasshaur. Mr. Wigton is the executor of the estate of the late James Passmore. The well known Passmore House in Philipsburg was recently leased by Mr. Fasshaur and the mission to Bellefonte was to attend to the details incident to the formal transfer of the license.

A fair sized audience was at Garman's Opera House on Tuesday night to see "The Morning After," which proved to be excruciatingly humorous, even if rather raw along the edges. Miss Goldie Joab and Carl Krusada, who were here recently with the "Beauty Spot" company," were in the cast. Much of the music was also from the "Beauty Spot" company. The graceful, winsome Miss Joab, with her singing and dancing, was the big end of Tuesday evening's performance.

Practical demonstrations with dynamite in draining swamp land, sub-soiling, tree planting, stump and boulder blasting with RED CROSS DYNAMITE will be given at the Furst farm, at the Curtin cross-roads on the Jacksonville road, on Tuesday afternoon, April 30th, at one o'clock, by the DuPont Powder Company. The public cordially invited. These demonstrations will prove most interesting and valuable to farmers and other land owners. The brand of dynamite used is for sale at the Potter-Hoy Hardware Company.

Lawyer Samuel F. Eldredge, of Cape May, was an over-Sunday visitor in Bellefonte. Sam. had no expectation of getting up this way at the present time, in fact he had made all arrangements to try a number of cases in court. It so happened that the trial judge became ill and the session of court was declared off. Sam. took advantage of the opportunity to make a flying visit to scenes of his school days and also accompany his wife back home. Mrs. Eldredge had been here for several weeks aiding her sister in caring for their mother, Mrs. William Laurie.

W. Harrison Wakler, Charles Mensch and George T. Bush departed for Altoona Friday noon to attend a meeting of the Temple of Shriners in that city, where a class of forty-four novitiates trod the hot sands and are now permitted to partake of camels milk. The two former mentioned went to Pittsburg on Saturday to attend a meeting of the Syris Temple of Shriners of that city. Mr. Bush, who was chairman of a committee to adopt a design for the official badge of the Altoona Temple, presented a neat original design which was adopted. The design had on the bar the front of a locomotive, representative of the railroad city, together with the scimitar and crescent emblems of the order, the pendant being a keystone representing the state and containing the horse shoe curve and the date of incorporation.

James B. Cook was a Bellefonte visitor over Sunday.

Miss Daisy Barnes visited over Sunday with friends in Altoona.

Andy McNitt, of the firm of Huyett & McNitt, enjoyed Sunday at Atlantic City.

"Mother's Day" Sunday, May 12th.

In an article in the May Woman's Home Companion entitled "To Celebrate Mother's Day," Margaret E. Sangster states the facts of the celebration as follows:

"The second Sunday in May has in recent years had the distinction of being "Mothers' Day." Services in honor of the mother, and in recognition of her faithfulness, gentleness, and devotion to the home, are held in many of the churches and in most of the Sunday-schools. The white carnation has been selected as the flower to be worn on the corsage, belt, or coat lapel on Mothers' Day. No flower of the garden or field could be a happier choice than this to be worn as Mother's own flower. Pure as the drifted snow, spicy and fragrant, and possessing a lasting quality beyond that of lily or rose, the white carnation stands for all that Mother is to the family and the race."
